REFERENCE

dated 12 January 1962

25X1

The test and evaluation reports on the following items were received as per reference: [ ] While [ ] recognizes that these reports were probably intended primarily for Headquarters in determining equipment suitability and required modifications, it is felt here that reports of this type can also be quite useful to the technician when such equipment is already in the field. These reports might save the technician time in determining the capabilities of the equipment, as well as help him utilize the equipment in such a way as to best realize its capabilities and avoid pitfalls that might otherwise be encountered. To this end it is felt that the condensed versions of the reports are fairly adequate, although even the complete reports do not always cover all the points that might be useful to the technician in the field, e.g., vulnerability to known countermeasure techniques. The condensed report on the Carrier Current equipment is felt to be particularly valuable.
